

The Wife of Bath's Tale

from The Canterbury Tales

Poetry by GEOFFREY CHAUCER

Connect to Your Life

Love and Marriage You are probably familiar with the phrase “the battle of the sexes.” This expression suggests that romantic relationships have an aspect of conflict, in which one party attempts to gain the upper hand. What are your own opinions on the subject? Would you say that a good marriage is basically an equal partnership, or do you think that one person needs to be the decision maker? Explain your opinions in a class discussion.

Build Background

Romance and Chivalry “The Wife of Bath’s Tale” belongs to the so-called Marriage Group of The Canterbury Tales, in which different pilgrims offer stories that express their philosophies of love and marriage. Set in the days of Britain’s legendary King Arthur, the story qualifies as a medieval romance—an adventure tale of knights and chivalry, in which the code of ideal knightly behavior (loyalty, faith, honor, and courtesy, especially to women) is stressed. In this story, however, a knight breaks the rules of chivalry and, as punishment, must undertake a quest.

LITERARY ANALYSIS NARRATOR Whether a story is told in prose or verse, the narrator is the person or voice that tells the story. In The Canterbury Tales, the narrator of the “Prologue” introduces the characters who will serve as narrators of the tales that follow. Reread lines 455–486 of the “Prologue” (page 125), which introduce the Wife of Bath. Then try to predict the view of love and marriage that she might present in her tale.

ACTIVE READING ANALYZING STRUCTURE Structure is the way in which the parts of a literary work are put together. A frame story is a story that serves as a narrative setting or frame for one or more other stories. The Canterbury Tales as a whole has a frame structure, in which the story of the pilgrims serves as a frame within which the pilgrims tell their stories. The structure of “The Wife of Bath’s Tale” features a main plot with several interruptions. For example, in the opening lines the Wife of Bath interrupts the main plot with a passage in which she criticizes friars. This particular interruption stems from the Wife’s ongoing quarrel with the Friar as they travel to Canterbury.

READER'S NOTEBOOK As you read “The Wife of Bath’s Tale,” use a chart similar to the one shown to keep track of the interruptions to the main story.

from The Wife of Bath's Prologue

The Pardoner started up, and thereupon
 “Madam,” he said, “by God and by St. John,
 That’s noble preaching no one could surpass!
 I was about to take a wife; alas!
 5 Am I to buy it on my flesh so dear?
 There’ll be no marrying for me this year!”

“You wait,” she said, “my story’s not begun.
 You’ll taste another brew before I’ve done;
 You’ll find it doesn’t taste as good as ale;
 10 And when I’ve finished telling you my tale
 Of tribulation in the married life
 In which I’ve been an expert as a wife,
 That is to say, myself have been the whip.
 So please yourself whether you want to sip
 15 At that same cask of marriage I shall broach.
 Be cautious before making the approach,
 For I’ll give instances, and more than ten.
 And those who won’t be warned by other men,
 By other men shall suffer their correction,
 20 So Ptolemy has said, in this connection.
 You read his Almagest; you’ll find it there.”

“Madam, I put it to you as a prayer,”
 The Pardoner said, “go on as you began!
 Tell us your tale, spare not for any man.
 25 Instruct us younger men in your technique.”
 “Gladly,” she said, “if you will let me speak,
 But still I hope the company won’t reprove me
 Though I should speak as fantasy may move me,
 And please don’t be offended at my views;
 30 They’re really only offered to amuse. . . .”

The Wife of Bath

3 noble preaching: In the passage preceding this excerpt, the Wife of Bath has spoken at length about her view of marriage.

15 cask: barrel; broach: tap into.

20 Ptolemy (tŏl’ə-mē): a famous astronomer of the second century A.D. The Almagest, his most famous work, does not, however, contain the proverb cited in lines 18–19.

The Wife of Bath's Tale

When good King Arthur ruled in ancient days
(A king that every Briton loves to praise)
This was a land brim-full of fairy folk.
The Elf-Queen and her courtiers joined and broke 35 Their elfin dance on many a green mead,
Or so was the opinion once, I read,
Hundreds of years ago, in days of yore.
But no one now sees fairies any more.
For now the saintly charity and prayer
40 Of holy friars seem to have purged the air;
They search the countryside through field and stream
As thick as motes that speckle a sun-beam,
Blessing the halls, the chambers, kitchens, bowers,
Cities and boroughs, castles, courts and towers,
45 Thorpes, barns and stables, outhouses and dairies,
And that's the reason why there are no fairies.
Wherever there was wont to walk an elf
To-day there walks the holy friar himself
As evening falls or when the daylight springs,
50 Saying his matins and his holy things,
Walking his limit round from town to town.
Women can now go safely up and down
By every bush or under every tree;
There is no other incubus but he,
55 So there is really no one else to hurt you
And he will do no more than take your virtue.

Now it so happened, I began to say,
Long, long ago in good King Arthur's day,
There was a knight who was a lusty liver.
60 One day as he came riding from the river
He saw a maiden walking all forlorn
Ahead of him, alone as she was born.
And of that maiden, spite of all she said,
By very force he took her maidenhead.

65 This act of violence made such a stir,
So much petitioning to the king for her,
That he condemned the knight to lose his head
By course of law. He was as good as dead

35 mead: meadow.

42 motes: specks of dust.

43 bowers: bedrooms.

45 thorpes: villages; outhouses: sheds.

47 wherever . . . elf: wherever an elf was accustomed to walk.

51 limit: the area to which a friar was restricted in his begging for donations.

54 incubus (in'kyə-bes): an evil spirit believed to descend on women while they sleep.

39–56 What seems to be the Wife of Bath's attitude toward friars?

61 forlorn: sad and lonely.

63–64 of that maiden . . . maidenhead: in spite of the maiden's protests, he robbed her of her virtue.

(It seems that then the statutes took that view)

- 70 But that the queen, and other ladies too,
Implored the king to exercise his grace
So ceaselessly, he gave the queen the case
And granted her his life, and she could choose
Whether to show him mercy or refuse.

71 grace: mercy; clemency.

65–74 What punishment do the king and the law demand? To whom does the king grant the final judgment?

- 75 The queen returned him thanks with all her might,
And then she sent a summons to the knight
At her convenience, and expressed her will:
“You stand, for such is the position still,
In no way certain of your life,” said she,
80 “Yet you shall live if you can answer me:
What is the thing that women most desire?
Beware the axe and say as I require.

- “If you can’t answer on the moment, though,
I will concede you this: you are to go
85 A twelvemonth and a day to seek and learn
Sufficient answer, then you shall return.
I shall take gages from you to extort
Surrender of your body to the court.”

87 gages: pledges.

- Sad was the knight and sorrowfully sighed,
90 But there! All other choices were denied,
And in the end he chose to go away
And to return after a year and day
Armed with such answer as there might be sent
To him by God. He took his leave and went.

- 95 He knocked at every house, searched every place,
Yes, anywhere that offered hope of grace.
What could it be that women wanted most?
But all the same he never touched a coast,
Country or town in which there seemed to be

Some said that women wanted wealth and treasure,
“Honor,” said some, some “Jollity and pleasure,”

TO implore (īm-plōr’) v. to plead; beg
KNOW concede (kən-sēd’) v. to grant or acknowledge, often unwillingly

Some "Gorgeous clothes" and others "Fun in bed,"
"To be oft widowed and remarried," said
105 Others again, and some that what most mattered
Was that we should be cosseted and flattered.
That's very near the truth, it seems to me;
A man can win us best with flattery.
To dance attendance on us, make a fuss,
110 Ensnares us all, the best and worst of us.

Some say the things we most desire are these:
Freedom to do exactly as we please,
With no one to reprove our faults and lies,
Rather to have one call us good and wise.
115 Truly there's not a woman in ten score
Who has a fault, and someone rubs the sore,
But she will kick if what he says is true;
You try it out and you will find so too.
However vicious we may be within 120 We like to be thought wise and void of sin.
Others assert we women find it sweet
When we are thought dependable, discreet
And secret, firm of purpose and controlled,
Never betraying things that we are told.
125 But that's not worth the handle of a rake;
Women conceal a thing? For Heaven's sake!
Remember Midas? Will you hear the tale?

Among some other little things, now stale,
Ovid relates that under his long hair
130 The unhappy Midas grew a splendid pair
Of ass's ears; as subtly as he might,
He kept his foul deformity from sight;
Save for his wife, there was not one that knew.
He loved her best, and trusted in her too.
135 He begged her not to tell a living creature
That he possessed so horrible a feature.
And she—she swore, were all the world to win,
She would not do such villainy and sin
As saddle her husband with so foul a name;
140 Besides to speak would be to share the shame.
Nevertheless she thought she would have died
Keeping this secret bottled up inside;

115 ten score: 200.

117 but she will: who will not.

120 void of sin: sinless.

127 Midas: a legendary king of Phrygia in Asia Minor.

129 Ovid (ōv'īd): an ancient Roman poet whose Metamorphoses is a storehouse of Greek and Roman legends. According to Ovid, it was a barber, not Midas's wife, who told the secret of his donkey's ears.

133 save: except.

KNOW

It seemed to swell her heart and she, no doubt,
Thought it was on the point of bursting out.

145 Fearing to speak of it to woman or man,
Down to a reedy marsh she quickly ran
And reached the sedge. Her heart was all on fire
And, as a bittern bumbles in the mire,
She whispered to the water, near the ground,
150 “Betray me not, O water, with thy sound!
To thee alone I tell it: it appears
My husband has a pair of ass’s ears!
Ah! My heart’s well again, the secret’s out!
I could no longer keep it, not a doubt.”
155 And so you see, although we may hold fast
A little while, it must come out at last,
We can’t keep secrets; as for Midas, well,
Read Ovid for his story; he will tell.

147 sedge: marsh grasses.

148 bumbles in the mire: booms in the swamp. (The bittern, a wading bird, is famous for its loud call.)
What does this comparison suggest about the queen’s whisper?

160 This knight that I am telling you about
Perceived at last he never would find out
What it could be that women loved the best.
Faint was the soul within his sorrowful breast,
As home he went, he dared no longer stay;
His year was up and now it was the day.

165 As he rode home in a dejected mood
Suddenly, at the margin of a wood,
He saw a dance upon the leafy floor
Of four and twenty ladies, nay, and more.
Eagerly he approached, in hope to learn
170 Some words of wisdom ere he should return;
But lo! Before he came to where they were,
Dancers and dance all vanished into air!
There wasn’t a living creature to be seen
Save one old woman crouched upon the green.
175 A fouler-looking creature I suppose
Could scarcely be imagined. She arose
And said, “Sir knight, there’s no way on from here.
Tell me what you are looking for, my dear,
For peradventure that were best for you;
180 We old, old women know a thing or two.”

Sir Gawain, from an illuminated manuscript

179 peradventure: perhaps.

“Dear Mother,” said the knight, “alack the day!
 I am as good as dead if I can’t say
 What thing it is that women most desire;
 If you could tell me I would pay your hire.”
 185 “Give me your hand,” she said, “and swear to do
 Whatever I shall next require of you
 —If so to do should lie within your might—
 And you shall know the answer before night.”
 “Upon my honor,” he answered, “I agree.”
 190 “Then,” said the crone, “I dare to guarantee
 Your life is safe; I shall make good my claim.
 Upon my life the queen will say the same.
 Show me the very proudest of them all
 In costly coverchief or jewelled caul
 195 That dare say no to what I have to teach.
 Let us go forward without further speech.”
 And then she crooned her gospel in his ear
 And told him to be glad and not to fear.

181 alack the day: an exclamation of sorrow, roughly equivalent to “Woe is me!”

The Knight and the Old Lady

They came to court. This knight, in full array,
 200 Stood forth and said, “O Qucen, I’ve kept my day
 And kept my word and have my answer ready.”

194 coverchief: kerchief; caul
 (kaul): an ornamental hair-net.

197 gospel: message.

199 in full array: in all his finery.

202 heady: giddy; impetuous.

203 grace: gift.

There sat the noble matrons and the heady
 Young girls, and widows too, that have the grace
 Of wisdom, all assembled in that place,
 205 And there the queen herself was throned to hear
 And judge his answer. Then the knight drew near
 And silence was commanded through the hall.

The queen gave order he should tell them all
 What thing it was that women wanted most.
 210 He stood not silent like a beast or post,
 But gave his answer with the ringing word
 Of a man’s voice and the assembly heard:

“My liege and lady, in general,” said he,
 “A woman wants the self-same sovereignty
 215 Over her husband as over her lover,
 And master him; he must not be above her.

213 liege (lē): lord.

214 sovereignty (sōv’er-yn-tē): rule;
 power.

214–215 How might a woman’s power over a lover differ from her power over a husband?

That is your greatest wish, whether you kill
Or spare me; please yourself. I wait your will."

In all the court not one that shook her head
220 Or contradicted what the knight had said;
Maid, wife and widow cried, "He's saved his life!"

And on the word up started the old wife,
The one the knight saw sitting on the green,
And cried, "Your mercy, sovereign lady queen!
225 Before the court disperses, do me right!
'Twas I who taught this answer to the knight,
For which he swore, and pledged his honor to it,
That the first thing I asked of him he'd do it,
So far as it should lie within his might.
230 Before this court I ask you then, sir knight,
To keep your word and take me for your wife;
For well you know that I have saved your life.
If this be false, deny it on your sword!"

"Alas!" he said, "Old lady, by the Lord
235 I know indeed that such was my behest,
But for God's love think of a new request,
Take all my goods, but leave my body free."
"A curse on us," she said, "if I agree!
I may be foul, I may be poor and old,
240 Yet will not choose to be, for all the gold
That's bedded in the earth or lies above,
Less than your wife, nay, than your very love!"

"My love?" said he. "By heaven, my damnation!
Alas that any of my race and station
245 Should ever make so foul a misalliance!"
Yet in the end his pleading and defiance
All went for nothing, he was forced to wed.
He takes his ancient wife and goes to bed.

Now peradventure some may well suspect
250 A lack of care in me since I neglect
To tell of the rejoicing and display
Made at the feast upon their wedding-day.
I have but a short answer to let fall;
I say there was no joy or feast at all,

235 behest (bĭ-hĕst'): promise.

244 race and station: family and rank.

245 misalliance (mĭs'ə-lĭ'əns): an unsuitable marriage.

255 Nothing but heaviness of heart and sorrow.
He married her in private on the morrow
And all day long stayed hidden like an owl,
It was such torture that his wife looked foul.

256 the morrow: the next day.

Great was the anguish churning in his head
260 When he and she were piloted to bed;
He wallowed back and forth in desperate style.
His ancient wife lay smiling all the while;
At last she said, "Bless us! Is this, my dear,
How knights and wives get on together here?
265 Are these the laws of good King Arthur's house?
Are knights of his all so contemptuous?
I am your own beloved and your wife,
And I am she, indeed, that saved your life;
And certainly I never did you wrong.
270 Then why, this first of nights, so sad a song?
You're carrying on as if you were half-witted.
Say, for God's love, what sin have I committed?
I'll put things right if you will tell me how."

260 piloted: led. (In the Middle Ages, it was customary for the wedding party to escort the bride and groom to their bedchamber.)

261 wallowed (wɒl'ɒd): rolled around; thrashed about.

"Put right?" he cried. "That never can be now!
275 Nothing can ever be put right again!
You're old, and so abominably plain,
So poor to start with, so low-bred to follow;
It's little wonder if I twist and wallow!
God, that my heart would burst within my breast!"

280 "Is that," said she, "the cause of your unrest?"

"Yes, certainly," he said, "and can you wonder?"

"I could set right what you suppose a blunder,
That's if I cared to, in a day or two,
If I were shown more courtesy by you.
285 Just now," she said, "you spoke of gentle birth,
Such as descends from ancient wealth and worth.
If that's the claim you make for gentlemen

contemptuous (kən-těmp'chō-əs) adj. scornful; openly disrespectful abominably (ə-bŏm'ə-nə-blē) adv. unpleasantly; terribly

290 Public and private, and who most intends
 To do what deeds of gentleness he can,
 Take him to be the greatest gentleman.
 Christ wills we take our gentleness from Him,
 Not from a wealth of ancestry long dim,
 295 Though they bequeath their whole establishment
 By which we claim to be of high descent.
 Our fathers cannot make us a bequest
 Of all those virtues that became them best
 And earned for them the name of gentlemen,
 300 But bade us follow them as best we can.

“Thus the wise poet of the Florentines,
 Dante by name, has written in these lines,
 For such is the opinion Dante launches:
 ‘Seldom arises by these slender branches
 305 Prowess of men, for it is God, no less,
 Wills us to claim of Him our gentleness.’
 For of our parents nothing can we claim
 Save temporal things, and these may hurt and maim.

“But everyone knows this as well as I;
 310 For if gentility were implanted by
 The natural course of lineage down the line,
 Public or private, could it cease to shine
 In doing the fair work of gentle deed?
 No vice or villainy could then bear seed.

315 “Take fire and carry it to the darkest house
 Between this kingdom and the Caucasus,
 And shut the doors on it and leave it there,
 It will burn on, and it will burn as fair
 As if ten thousand men were there to see,
 320 For fire will keep its nature and degree,
 I can assure you, sir, until it dies.

“But gentleness, as you will recognize,
 Is not annexed in nature to possessions.
 Men fail in living up to their professions;
 325 But fire never ceases to be fire.

285–292 What does the old woman think is the chief qualification of a gentleman? How would you define “gentle birth” and “gentleness” as used in this passage?

301 Florentines: the people of Florence, Italy.

302 Dante (dān’tā): a famous medieval Italian poet. The quotation in lines 304–306 is a paraphrase of a passage in Dante’s most famous work, The Divine Comedy, which he completed in 1321.

310 gentility (jěn-tīl’ī-tē): the quality possessed by a gentle, or noble, person.

316 Caucasus (kō’ka-sēs): a region of western Asia, between the Black and Caspian seas.

God knows you'll often find, if you enquire,

327 lording: lord; nobleman.

If you would be esteemed for the mere name
Of having been by birth a gentleman
330 And stemming from some virtuous, noble clan,
And do not live yourself by gentle deed
Or take your father's noble code and creed,
You are no gentleman, though duke or earl.
Vice and bad manners are what make a churl.

334 churl (chŭrl): low-class person; boor. Why might the sentiment expressed in this line have been viewed as fairly radical in the Wife of Bath's day?

335 "Gentility is only the renown
For bounty that your fathers handed down,
Quite foreign to your person, not your own;
Gentility must come from God alone.
That we are gentle comes to us by grace
340 And by no means is it bequeathed with place.

"Reflect how noble (says Valerius)
Was Tullius surnamed Hostilius,
Who rose from poverty to nobleness.
And read Boethius, Seneca no less,
345 Thus they express themselves and are agreed:
'Gentle is he that does a gentle deed.'
And therefore, my dear husband, I conclude
That even if my ancestors were rude,
Yet God on high—and so I hope He will—
350 Can grant me grace to live in virtue still,
A gentlewoman only when beginning
To live in virtue and to shrink from sinning.

341 Valerius (və-lîr'ê-əs): Valerius Maximus, a Roman writer of the first century A.D. who compiled a collection of historical anecdotes.

342 Tullius (tŭl'ê-əs) surnamed Hostilius (hŏ-stîl'ê-əs): Tullius Hostilius—in Roman legend, the third king of the Romans.

344 Boethius (bō-ê'thê-əs): a Christian philosopher of the Dark Ages; Seneca (sĕn'Y-kə): an ancient Roman philosopher, writer, teacher, and politician.

"As for my poverty which you reprove,
Almighty God Himself in whom we move,
355 Believe and have our being, chose a life
Of poverty, and every man or wife,
Nay, every child can see our Heavenly King
Would never stoop to choose a shameful thing.
No shame in poverty if the heart is gay,
360 As Seneca and all the learned say.
He who accepts his poverty unhurt
I'd say is rich although he lacked a shirt.
But truly poor are they who whine and fret
And covet what they cannot hope to get.
365 And he that, having nothing, covets not,

Is rich, though you may think he is a sot.

366 sot: fool.

“True poverty can find a song to sing.
Juvenal says a pleasant little thing:
‘The poor can dance and sing in the relief
370 Of having nothing that will tempt a thief.’
Though it be hateful, poverty is good,
A great incentive to a livelihood,
And a great help to our capacity
For wisdom, if accepted patiently.
375 Poverty is, though wanting in estate,
A kind of wealth that none calumniate.
Poverty often, when the heart is lowly,
Brings one to God and teaches what is holy,
Gives knowledge of oneself and even lends
380 A glass by which to see one’s truest friends.
And since it’s no offense, let me be plain;
Do not rebuke my poverty again.

368 Juvenal (jōō’və-nəl): an ancient Roman satirist.

375 wanting in estate: lacking in grandeur.

376 calumniate (kə-lŭm’nē-āt’): criticize with false statements; slander.

“Lastly you taxed me, sir, with being old.
Yet even if you never had been told 385 By ancient books, you gentlemen engage,
Yourself in honor to respect old age.
To call an old man ‘father’ shows good breeding,
And this could be supported from my reading.

“You say I’m old and fouler than a fen.
390 You need not fear to be a cuckold, then.
Filth and old age, I’m sure you will agree,
Are powerful wardens over chastity.
Nevertheless, well knowing your delights,
I shall fulfil your worldly appetites.

389 fen: marsh.

390 cuckold (kŭk’eld): a husband whose wife is unfaithful.

“You have two choices; which one will you try?
395 To have me old and ugly till I die,
But still a loyal, true, and humble wife
That never will displease you all her life,
Or would you rather I were young and pretty

Which would you have? The choice is all your own."

The knight thought long, and with a piteous groan
 405 At last he said, with all the care in life,
 "My lady and my love, my dearest wife,
 I leave the matter to your wise decision.
 You make the choice yourself, for the provision
 Of what may be agreeable and rich
 410 In honor to us both, I don't care which;
 Whatever pleases you suffices me."

"And have I won the mastery?" said she,
 "Since I'm to choose and rule as I think fit?"
 "Certainly, wife," he answered her, "that's it."
 415 "Kiss me," she cried. "No quarrels! On my oath
 And word of honor, you shall find me both,
 That is, both fair and faithful as a wife;
 May I go howling mad and take my life
 Unless I prove to be as good and true
 420 As ever wife was since the world was new!
 And if to-morrow when the sun's above
 I seem less fair than any lady-love,
 Than any queen or empress east or west,
 Do with my life and death as you think best.
 425 Cast up the curtain, husband. Look at me!"

And when indeed the knight had looked to see,
 Lo, she was young and lovely, rich in charms.
 In ecstasy he caught her in his arms,
 His heart went bathing in a bath of blisses
 430 And melted in a hundred thousand kisses,
 And she responded in the fullest measure
 With all that could delight or give him pleasure.

So they lived ever after to the end
 In perfect bliss; and may Christ Jesus send 435 Us husbands meek and young and fresh in bed,
 And grace to overbid them when we wed.
 And—Jesu hear my prayer!—cut short the lives
 Of those who won't be governed by their wives;
 And all old, angry niggards of their pence,
 440 God send them soon a very pestilence!

Connect to the Literature

1. What Do You Think?

Were you surprised by the outcome of the knight's quest? Why or why not?

Comprehension Check

- What change does the queen make in the knight's sentence?
- What information does the old woman give the knight?
- What happens to the old woman after the knight agrees to abide by her decision?

Think Critically

2. In what way is the question that the queen poses to the knight related to the crime that he has committed?
3. What theme, or message, about marriage would you say the tale conveys? Do you agree with the message? Why or why not?
4. ACTIVE READING ANALYZING STRUCTURE Look over your chart in your READER'S NOTEBOOK and review the reasons you inferred. What do the interruptions tell you about what matters to the Wife of Bath?
5. Consider the narrator of the "Prologue." How would you describe his values?

THINK ABOUT

- his characterizations of people like the Summoner, the Pardoner, and the Wife of Bath
- his opinions of their actions
- his description of himself as "short of wit" in line 766 of the "Prologue" (page 134)

Extend Interpretations

6. Comparing Texts Which part of The Canterbury Tales—the "Prologue" or the two tales—did you find the most enjoyable or interesting? Give reasons for your choice.
7. Critic's Corner One critic has described Chaucer as "a modern writer," one whose work can be appreciated by every generation of readers. Do you agree with this observation? Cite specific passages of The Canterbury Tales to back up your opinion.
8. Connect to Life Do you see any similarities between the attitudes of the Wife of Bath and the old woman in "The Wife of Bath's Tale" and the attitudes of modern American women? Cite details to support your answer.

Literary Analysis

NARRATOR The teller of a story in prose or verse is known as the story's narrator. The narrator may be a character in the story or a voice outside the action. In the "Prologue" from The Canterbury Tales, a narrator (whom Chaucer identifies as himself) introduces several characters, who then narrate the various tales.

Cooperative Learning Activity In a small-group discussion, consider how the portrait of the Wife of Bath in lines 455–486 of the "Prologue" (page 125) relates to the tale that she tells. Then work with the group to create a chart in which you list as many details about the Wife of Bath as you can. Include details about her appearance, skills, social position, personality, attitudes, and motives.

Detail	Evidence
worthy	"Prologue," lines 455 and 469
somewhat deaf	"Prologue," line 456
